Disability Insurance provides benefits for some of the most common reasons for going out on disability, including short term and long term conditions like maternity, mental health, back injuries, digestive disorders, arthritis and heart issues.

It may be more affordable than you think.

Because your employer's plan offers group rates, this coverage may cost less than insurance you buy on your own.

Why do I need Long Term Disability? Short Term Disability coverage replaces a portion of your income for a shorter period of time if you're unable to work as a result of a brief illness, injury or while on maternity leave. Long Term Disability coverage pays a portion of your income, and generally begins after Short Term Disability ends, and continues until you return to work or reach retirement age.

You can use benefits however you wish—for housing, college tuition, monthly bills, and other expenses.

Your plan pays in addition to other coverage you may have, like medical and accident insurance.

Disability Insurance covers disabling illnesses or injuries that Worker's Compensation or Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) benefits may not cover. Many workers mistakenly assume that a disabling illness or injury will be covered by Worker's Compensation or Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI). In reality, Worker's Compensation addresses on-the-job accident and/ or illnesses only, and SSDI covers disabilities that are more long-term in nature (those expected to last longer than one year). Also, there are stringent eligibility requirements for SSDI, and an average processing time of more than two years.
